HORACE REEDER DIES FOLLOWING A LONG ILLNESS

Widely Known Realtor Had Undergone A Major Operation Several Months Ago

A NATIVE OF NEWTOWN

Former President of Newtown
C. of C.; Survived by Wife and One Daughter

NEWTOWN, Feb. 18.—Horace G. Reeder, a prominent Bucks county realtor, who served as Recorder of Deeds for Bucks county, from 1916 until 1929, died in the Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia, yesterday, following an illness of several months, during which time he underwent a major operation in the Jefferson Hospital.

Following his operation several months ago his condition permitted his return to his home here, but several weeks ago he was compelled to return to the hospital.

Mr. Reeder, long an outstanding citizen of the county, was born in this borough on July 13, 1858, a son of the late Edward Hicks and Sophia Gorton Reeder. His father was a well known roofing contractor. Mr. Reeder received his education in the schools of Newtown and at the age of 13 began earning money by carrying papers about the town.

For a period of four years after he reached the age of 14 he was employed as a clerk in the dry goods and notion store of W. Wallace Trego. In 1885 he entered the real estate office of the late J. Pemberton Hutchinson, and in 1889 started in business for himself as an insurance and general business agent, retaining, however, for a few years a partnership with Mr. Hutchinson.

Later Mr. Reeder launched into business entirely for himself and since that time became a successful real estate and insurance broker. Politically he was a Republican and from 1916 to 1929 he served as Recorder of Deeds.

At one time Mr. Reeder served as president of the Newtown Chamber of Commerce in which he was an active influence for years. He was a member of the Philadelphia and National Real Estate Boards and a director of the Newtown Cemetery Company.

Fraternally he was a member of the Bristol Lodge, No. 970, B. P. O. E.; Defiance Lodge, No. 335, K. of P.; Siloam Lodge, No. 265, I. O. F., and of Curtis Encampment, No. 77, I. O. O. F., and Northern Star Castle, No. 121, Ancient Order Knights of the Mystic Chain.

Mr. Reeder was also affiliated with the City Club of Philadelphia, the Keystone Automobile Club and the Bucks County Fish, Game and Forestry Association.

The deceased was also a member of St. Luke's P. E. Church and for many years served as superintendent of the Sunday school connected with that church.

Mr. Reeder was married on February 11, 1899, to Miss Ada Burrill, daughter of J. Charles and Martha Briggs Burrill, who survives, as does also one daughter, Miriam, wife of Amos C. Bond, of this place.

ACKNOWLEDGES DONATION

Acknowledgment is made by the local branch of the American Red Cross of a donation of $19 for the drought relief fund from Dr. Frank Lehman. The fund from Bristol now totals $331.

WHO MURDERED THE BARONESS
STILL DARK MYSTERY IN QUIET TOWN

Editor's Note: Carl Carey, reporter for The New York Planet happened to be a guest at the famous Eagle's Nest, Peter Hardy's estate near Kingcliffe, New York, on the night of the mysterious murder of Baroness Wiese. His story, printed with the Planet's kind permission, follows:

By Carl Carey

Yesterday I told how the body of tall, dashing, Baroness Wiese, was found in the rustic summer house at Eagle's Nest and how the town of Kingcliffe was in an uproar as a result. I was a member of that fatulent dinner party and one of the first to view the slain woman.

She was killed by a single bullet. When found she wore the Spanish shawl of Mary Frost, wife of Teddy Frost, well-known former Broadway playboy and also a guest at Eagle's Nest. Although police, under the direction of old Tim Furey, local chief, have begun an exhaustive examination of all the circumstances of the crime, the mystery today does not seem lessened in the slightest degree.

I have had a long talk with Chief Furey. He indicated to me his intention of placing Robert Trent, semi-invalid and former war veteran, under arrest. Trent, Furey believes, hated the Baroness because of snubs to his wife.

Other suspects who have undergone and will undergo questioning include the Baron Wiese, who, it is believed, might have been incensed by jealousy of his vivacious wife; Ted Frost, who may have caught sight of the Baroness wearing his wife's shawl and believed it was Mrs. Frost going to a rendezvous in the summer house; and Mary Frost, although the last-named is said to have an iron-clad alibi, not yet disclosed.

The whole affair is charged with complications, some of which are romantic and others rather sinister. The young and lovely "Bim" Martin, daughter of the local newspaper proprietor, Tom Martin, is entering vigorously into the search for clues. "Bim" recently returned from finishing school and has been seen much in the company of Walter Vance, assistant chief of police in Kingcliffe. She is an energetic girl reporter. Both she and Vance were at Eagle's Nest at the time of the murder.

You have just read the sort of story which might have appeared if the crime in the summer house at Eagle's Nest had actually occurred, instead of being the hub of the most exciting fiction serial of the year—"Murder at Eagle's Nest," by Winifred Van Duzer. Begin this thrilling story Thursday in the Courier.

Entertains Friends In Honor of Birthday

Miss Frances Mertini, of Detroit, Michigan, who is paying an extended visit to her grandmother, Mrs. Antoinetta Caruso, of Jefferson avenue and Mansion street, recently celebrated her birthday anniversary by entertaining a number of friends in the Italian Presbyterian Church Hall, corner Wood street and Lincoln avenue. Dancing and games were enjoyed throughout the evening and Mr. Leonard Martini and his orchestra furnished the music for the dancing.

Mr. Freddie Seneca entertained the guests with his clever dancing and tricks. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

The hall was attractively decorated with red and white crepe paper, and paper hearts, in keeping with St. Valentine.

Miss Mertini was presented with many beautiful birthday gifts.

The guests present were from Bristol, Andalusia, Holmesburg and Philadelphia.

SHROVE TUESDAY CARD PARTY FINE SUCCESS

Large Group of Players Vie
For Many Handsome
Prizes

PINOCHLE AND "500"

The annual Shrove Tuesday card party was held in St. Mark's Hall last evening. This party is sponsored by the "Sodality" and is always looked forward to as one of the outstanding parties of the season.

Twenty tables of pinochle and fifteen of "500" were formed. The display of prizes warranted the players, being conservative in their playings, thus enabling them to be among those attaining high scores.

Those winning prizes in the game of pinochle were:

IN AUTO-TRUCK CRASH

Leonard Armstrong Sustains
Compound Fracture of Ankle

NO INTERNAL INJURIES

Leonard Armstrong, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Armstrong, 310 Jefferson avenue, along with two boy friends, met with a serious accident late Sunday night as he and his friends were returning to New Brunswick, N. J., after spending the day here with Mr. Armstrong's parents.

Armstrong is employed in the Essex County Hospital for the Insane at New Brunswick. He and his friends spent the week-end here and were driving home when they crashed into a large truck.

Armstrong suffered a compound fracture of the right ankle and lacerations. His friends were thrown clear of the car and were not hurt.

Armstrong was identified by a letter which he carried in his pocket bearing the signature of James L. McGee, superintendent of public safety, of Bristol.

Ash Wednesday Observed
By Many Bristol Folks

Ash Wednesday was formally observed by many residents in Bristol today.

Several churches of the borough conducted morning services, observing the commencement of the Lenten season.

At St. James's Episcopal Church Holy Communion was served this morning at 10 a. m., by Rev. George E. Boswell who also delivered a sermon. The service was well attended. Evening prayer and sermon will occur at this edifice this evening at eight. On each Thursday evening at eight, commencing February 26th, special out-of-town preachers will be at St. James's to deliver sermons.

At St. Ann's and St. Mark's Catholic churches this morning mass was said, many observing Ash Wednesday at these edifices also.

"Wishy" Griffin Orders
Oysters; Gets 2 Pearls

Aloysius J. Griffin, 706 Pine street, ordered a half dozen raw oysters the other day in the Keystone Hotel, here, and while devouring the choice bivalves, came across two pearls.

Yesterday "Wishy," as he is familiarly known about town, took the pearls to Trenton and disposed of them for $60.

The Keystone is now enjoying an unusual demand for "raws," just now.

BENSALEM TEAMS MEET DEFEAT HERE

Boys Lose by Score of 40 to 18; Girls, 49 to 21

GAMES WERE ONE-SIDED

By Leon Schiffer

With a well-balanced squad in which all regulars figured in the scoring, Bristol High defeated the Bensalem quintet in the local "xym" last night by the score of 40 to 18.

At halftime the Cardinal and Gray led 18 to 10, the visitors being able to find the range of the net for only three field goals and four foul tries, all of which were made by Andrews.

In the second half the Bensalem lads played better but that first half lead proved too great a handicap.

George Herman and Maris Hart starred for the local boys. Herman was high scorer with five goals and four fouls, while Hart was a close second with three field goals and one foul.

Andrews starred for the visitors with ten points, scoring six from the floor and four from the foul line. The other twin pointers were made by Brown.

In the earlier game of the evening the local girls defeated the Bensalem sextet by the score of 49 to 21.

The quick, sturdy-looking Bensalem quintet had six previous victories to its credit this season, when it visited Bristol High yesterday and little did it dream of another setback at the hands of our own girls. However, the local (Continued on Page 6)

Woman, 75, Tramping
To Daughter's Home
In New York City

By "The Stroller"

A woman, who said she was 75 years of age, walked into the Municipal Building last night, and asked for a night's lodging.

"What is the name?" asked James L. McGee, superintendent of public safety.

"Margaret Connelly," was the reply.

"That's a good old German name," said McGee.

"Irish, if you please," corrected Margaret.

"How old?"

"75 years of age."

"Where do you live?"

"New Orleans."

"Where are you going?"

"To visit my daughter in New York."

The aged woman traveler then undid the story of her tramp from New Orleans to Bristol. She said she had walked all the way and wanted to make Trenton today. She carried numerous possessions wrapped in bundles.

"My daughter would not send me the money, so I walked," she said. "And she'll have a job to put me out, once I get there."

"Say, Chief, have you got a nib you could give me before I go asleep?"

"Sorry, but I can't accommodate you," replied McGee.

GRAND JURY INDICTS HANEY FOR MURDER

Yardley Potter Must Face
Court Trial for Killing
His Wife

NEW COURT PLAN

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 18.—Charles Haney, 27, Yardley potter, was indicted yesterday by the Grand Jury on a charge of murder. The true bill was returned at 10:15 when Jesse G. Webster, of Hulmeville, foreman, announced the findings.

Haney, who shot and killed his wife, Mary, twenty-six, at her mother's home in Yardley three months ago, was in court Tuesday morning when Judge Calvin S. Boyer charged the Grand Jury and then sent them out to act on the case.

With his jaw wrapped in adhesive tapes and the lower portion held intact by wire, Haney was a helpless-looking individual as he sat in prisoner's row while the Grand Jury heard testimony before returning a true bill.

Since Haney tried to commit suicide he has lost considerable weight. His physical condition is said by doctors to be anything but strong due to the fact that he is kept alive on liquid food due to the nature of the injury to his jaw.

Haney's case is listed as No. 17 on the trial list. It is scheduled to get under way the second week of court.

The grand jury ignored the bills against Mitchell Ryzinski, charging felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods, and against Charles Wilson, charging assault and battery.

Starting at this term of court, a new policy will be given a trial, whereby the traverse jury will not be called until the second week of court.

The grand jury only is in session the first week.

Heretofore both the grand jury and the traverse jury met the first week. This means there will be three weeks of court instead of two.

During the first week of criminal court, in addition to the grand jury work, plead guilty cases will be heard.

Increased criminal business has necessitated 72 traverse jurors for each week instead of 60 as heretofore.

It is expected the new policy will expedite the completion of criminal court business.

Reader To Give Selections
At Travel Club Meeting

Readings will be given by Miss Elizabeth Cornell at the Travel Club meeting in the club home on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A social hour will be enjoyed, when Colonial dames will pour tea. The business session will occupy the first part of the program.

Mrs. Serrill Douglass and Mrs. Earl Tomb will be hostesses.

VISITS BRISTOL FRIEND

Miss Beatrice Leitz, of Croydon, was a guest over the week-end of Miss Florence Brannigan, of Madison street.

Langhorne Boy, Accidentally Shot, Expected to Recover

LANGHORNE, Feb. 18.—A Langhorne boy of 13 years, shot yesterday when a rifle in the hands of his father was accidentally discharged, is reported as doing "fairly well" at the Mercer Hospital, Trenton, N. J., today.

The youth, William Schramm suffered a wound of the left thigh, and immediately after the discharge of the gun, the elder Schramm hurried with the boy to the Trenton hospital for treatment. The wound is not considered of a serious nature.

The boy was standing upon the sidewalk in front of his home, when his father came from the house with the rifle. It is stated he passed the gun from his right to his left hand in order to switch on the porch light. The weapon was discharged and the lad screamed. No time was lost by Schramm in his effort to reach the institution in order that medical attention might be secured.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS CONVENE AT EDDINGTON

Members of Fifth District of Bucks County Conduct Rally

FINE ADDRESSES HEARD

EDDINGTON, Feb. 18.—The Fifth District Sunday School Association of Bucks County conducted a rally in the Presbyterian Church, here, last evening, with a goodly representation of the churches of the district despite the stormy weather. Approximately 125 people were in attendance.

Mr. Gentry, Morrisville, superintendent of the association, was in charge of the meeting. Scripture was read by the Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton, pastor of the Bristol Presbyterian Church; and Rev. Howard L. Zepp, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Bristol, led in prayer.

The speaker of the evening was Rev. S. Stanley Kendig, Philadelphia, assistant director of religious education of the Pennsylvania Sunday School Association. Rev. Kendig's subject was "How to Secure Trained Leaders." He explained the difference between methods of trained leaders and leaders who merely tell something to the scholars. He also

TOLERATION

Here is a word much misused. We claim to be tolerant on many matters to which, as a matter of fact, we are merely indifferent. They do not concern us, and we are therefore quite willing not to concern ourselves much about them. If those who find them important will refrain from crossing the path of our own purposes and opinions, we are entirely agreeable that they shall go their own gait.

We pride ourselves on this as though it were the chief gain of the modern world. Yet if we hark back to the ages which we so complacently label as bigoted and intolerant, we find that their passionate strife grew chiefly out of the fact that men were passionately interested in many matters which the modern world effects to ignore. Their intolerance was an index of the strength of their beliefs and devotions, just as much as it revealed their human weakness. They loved greatly, and therefore they sinned greatly.

We have today not so much gained a victory over intolerance as we have sidestepped its principal occasions.

THE PRICE-FIXING SCHEME

The senate investigation of retail prices of food is playing into the hands of Representative Clyde Kelly in his prolonged fight for legalized control of retail prices by manufacturers through passage of his resale price bill.

This bill would place the power of the law behind retail prices fixed by manufacturers of trade-marked goods, the only expediency now left to such manufacturers being a refusal to sell more goods to retailers not conforming to the fixed prices.

While this measure would prevent some price cutting and discourage the taking of excessive profits, the number of manufacturers who fix the retail prices of their own goods is so small that the public would benefit but little from such a law.

Economists freely condemn the plan as stifling competition among retailers and perpetuating inefficiencies in prevailing methods of distribution of goods, preventing the retailer from passing on to his customer any savings he may make by his skill, judgment and efficiency.

This is clear case of trying to nullify the laws of supply and demand, which congress has tried to accomplish often of late without success. Not all the laws remaining in the ingenious minds of lawmakers can protect the poor business man from the good or replace all merchants on the same footing. The consumer decides such things by searching out the stores and manufacturers which best serve him.

Chief among things that come to him who waits are bills.

Some people take themselves too seriously to be taken seriously.

Insurance companies say most men are honest, but not even a dishonest man could beat an insurance company.

A minister says married people should never stop courting. Many doubt, but it is the kind of courting that causes, not prevents, divorce.

CROYDON

Mrs. Richard Barlow, of Pennsylvania avenue, has been very ill for the past week. Mrs. Smith, State Road and Rosa avenue, is recuperating.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy, of State Road, and Rosa avenue, entertained their son and family, of Mayfair, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kershaw, of Pennsylvania avenue, entertained last week Mr. Kershaw's sister from Chester.

Mrs. H. Jester, of Pennsylvania avenue, has been very ill suffering with laryngitis and gripe.

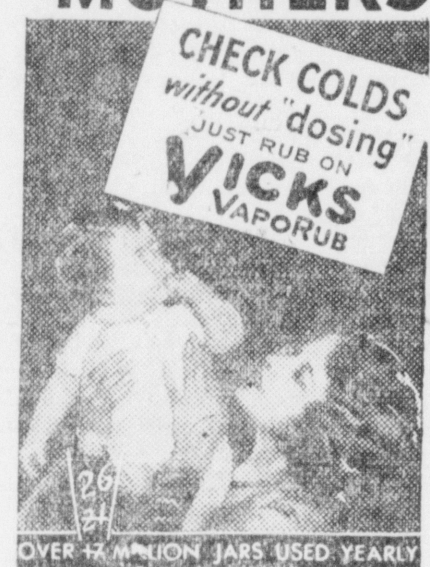

The old home, Cedar and Magnolia avenue, is being beautifully renovated on the exterior with gray shingles and plate glass windows, which helps to make the entrance to Croydon more attractive.

Saturday evening the Croydon Boy Scouts, met in their meeting room, Rosa avenue, and went by bus to Philadelphia to enjoy a basketball game. Tickets were received by Scoutmasters Foundas and Kynoch, who accompanied the Scouts.

The Croydon Boy Scouts Troop No. 2 will hold an investiture ceremony Friday evening at their headquarters, Rosa avenue, when six boys will receive their tenderfoot badges. At the close of the meeting the boys will march to the Croydon fire house where they will play a game of dart baseball against the independent order of Americans.

The Pansy troop of Croydon Girl Scouts will meet on Thursday evening and take a lesson in first aid. These lessons are very interesting and a great benefit to the Scouts in case of an accident where they might be called on for assistance. Captain Brenner wishes as many to be present as possible.

"FOREST LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER LIV.

A WINDOW curtain rattled faintly in the breeze from the open window. A bee buzzed on the other side of the pane. Outside, someone was sprinkling a flower bed. You could hear the spatter of the water on the leaves, smell the warm dust and fresh, woody smell of wet shrubs.

The smell of the soil in Summer of growing things. It brought back the day she let the stage go off without her while she lay in the grass, lost in Roger's arms. The funny little garden back of the cabin. The string beans he had planted, that she had never waited to see.

Tears welled slowly, dripped miserably down her cheeks. She brushed them away with the back of her hand, but they kept on coming. Tears of bereavement and defeat.

"Why Nancy . . . you're crying."

She nodded hopelessly. "I know. I can't help it. I'll go. It . . . it was useless . . . I shouldn't have come."

Misunderstood Tears.

His heart began to hammer. There was a roaring in his ears. She . . . she must care . . . to have come . . . like that . . .

That old black coat, no hat, fastidious Nancy, so disheveled, so broken. He opened his mouth to speak. "Nancy . . . my dear . . ."

And then he remembered. It wasn't for him. It was for her lover, the fellow who rode his horse over the cliff.

When he could trust his voice he said, "Don't take it too hard, youngster. We've all got to die some time. Maybe it's better . . . he'd have been pretty bad off had he lived."

And he thought, "That isn't the half of it. Nobody but me, and his wife, will ever know just how bad off he'd have been."

She saw the bitter, twisting smile come around the corners of his mouth, and something else, something fleeting and tortured, and she knew as surely as if he had told her that he knew about Jack Beamer, that he still loved her, and that he would never, never take her back.

She had got up unsteadily. There was no use in staying. Talk would only make it harder.

"Goodbye, Roger . . . I'm glad you're . . . all right." She held out her hand, but he did not see it. He had turned his face to the wall.

"Goodbye, Nancy. Thanks for coming."

She turned and stumbled toward the door. And suddenly she changed her mind. She had come to tell him something, and she hadn't told him. Never mind if it was useless . . . get it out . . . have it over with, once and for ever.

"Roger."

"Yes, Nancy."

"Roger, I know what you think of me, and you're right. But I'd just like you to know that I never really loved anybody but you, that I even forgot poor Jack was dead after I read about you . . . being hurt, and never thought of him again until you spoke . . . now . . . And I know you wouldn't . . . anyway, but it doesn't matter . . . I wanted to come back to you . . . I wanted to come back."

Her voice broke. With a little gulp, half sob, half cry, she groped for the door and plunged through it into the hall.

When Roger opened his eyes the nurse was standing there, where she had stood.

"Mr. and Mrs. MacKimmions are here. If you're not too tired," she said.

"How are you, Decatur? Well . . . looking fine?" There was Jack MacKimmions, and at his heels, Helen . . . "Oh, Mr. Decatur, I was SO sorry to hear you were injured . . . I told Jack I couldn't have felt worse if it was a brother . . . but you're looking fine, except, of course, those bandages to give you a kind of . . . well, a funny look . . . Jack, don't fidget so! Sit down, honey. Mr. Decatur won't care if you sit on the bed. These hospital rooms! It was the same thing when I was here, when Junior came, you know, and I only had one chair unless I asked specially, and it was so . . ."

"Just a minute, dear. Decatur's trying to get in a word."

"Jack . . . get Nancy. Bring her back."

"Nancy! But I—you mean—"

Roger waved frantically toward the door. "Get her—she'll be gone—she—she—"

"Jack MacKimmions! That girl was Mrs. Decatur . . . I KNEW I'd seen her somewhere. Did you ever in all your life . . . Hurry, dear!"

MacKimmions got up stupidly. "Sure. Only I won't know where."

"Find her . . . for God's sake find her. Make her . . . come back . . ."

Roger sank back on the pillows. The helpless, irrefragable tears of weakness sprang to his eyes. He turned to the wall again, to hide them.

MacKimmions made for the door, and after him went his wife, Helen.

It was not hard to find Nancy. They stumbled over her, weeping at the dark turn of the stairs.

Helen gave her a handkerchief, and offered a small, pinkish powder. Nancy took them gratefully. One on each side, they escorted her back to the door. She did not ask where they were taking her, did not look, or seem to care.

Jack opened the door with his free hand. They steered her in, as if she were a wound-up, walking doll. Then they closed the door.

The Veil Lifted.

"Well, I must say," Helen said, "that she's changed! To think I was almost afraid of her when she came to see me, she was so stylish! And now . . . Jack MacKimmions, I never saw such a mess in my life. And there's certainly something very funny about it, because the nurse didn't call her Mrs. Decatur, and I noticed particularly that she wasn't wearing a wedding ring . . . Jack . . . you don't THINK . . ."

For the first time in his life, good-natured Jack MacKimmions spoke sharply to his wife. "I'm not thinking, and don't you do any thinking, either. Don't you forget Decatur's my best friend."

"NUTS! The nurse did call her Mrs. Decatur—I heard her myself."

For he had suddenly remembered the name that the nurse did call her . . . Hollenbeck . . . the same name that the Beamer woman said . . . So that was why old Roger shut her up! To protect this Nancy . . . this girl who left him for rich Jack Beamer . . .

"Jack, you needn't glare at me like that! I haven't done anything! I really didn't mean—"

He roused himself with an effort.

fort, drew her to him, and began to stroke her smooth, pale hair clumsily. "I know, honey. I . . . I wasn't quite fair with you. I was just worried about Decatur. Helen, if she comes back to the shack, you'd be nice to her, wouldn't you?"

"Why, Jack, of course!" Helen's guileless gray eyes were fixed on him wonderingly.

"Because Decatur would feel it, and he's had so darn much hard luck already . . . And it's just one of those things, honey, that never get explained. Maybe if we knew . . . aw, NUTS!" He broke off, embarrassed.

She smiled and put her rough little hands lovingly on his shoulders. "Of course I'll be nice to her. And oh, Jack—don't you feel sorry for everybody who isn't as happy as we?"

Sunshine Again.

Behind the closed door of Roger's hospital room, Nancy was making her second farewell. There was no bitterness now—just sadness. The almost unbearable sorrow of "it might have been."

"I might have known you would come," he said wistfully. "You thought I was all shot to pieces, didn't you? I'll bet you were even prepared to nurse an invalid for the rest of his days . . . poor kid! But it isn't necessary, thank heaven. I don't need you."

"No, you don't need me. And I'm happy for you. It's just another . . . joke . . . on me . . . that's all."

"Joke?"

"Yes. Don't you see that it was always I who needed you, more than you did me? But I didn't have sense enough to know it. Isn't it funny how you find out things after it's too late? And get things after you've stopped wanting them—"

"You mean—"

"Oh, everything." She laughed a little wildly. "The family has even got rich. Can you tie that? Isn't that the crowning touch?"

And you . . . sitting up, chipper as ever, not needing anything not even a HAIRCUT!"

"Nancy!" He sat bolt upright in bed.

"After me, coming like a melodramatic fool in the middle of the night, picturing myself making mustard plasters in the cabin . . . and all the time . . . and all the time . . . ROGER! You DO want me? You do—"

For he had hefted up his arms, his poor bandaged face alight, and she had sunk on her knees beside the bed and laid her wet face on his flame-letted shoulder . . . "Oh, my darling, I need you—I need you so!"

"And that was the way Nancy Decatur, nee Hollenbeck, came back."

"Of course it was a silly, school-girl prank and her papa and I are very angry!" Mama told her friends. She was going out again, now that there was a car, and new clothes, and the house was fixed over. "But it IS romantic!"

"Yes, my youngest girl married a ranger. Lives right up in the mountains," papa told the men from the bank when they called.

"Great big six-footer. Wonderful shot. My idea of a real he-man. Not that my oldest girl didn't do well for herself, too. Married that young millionaire, Matthew Tully, you know. Well . . . it's nice to think you brought them up well and lived to see them happily married!"

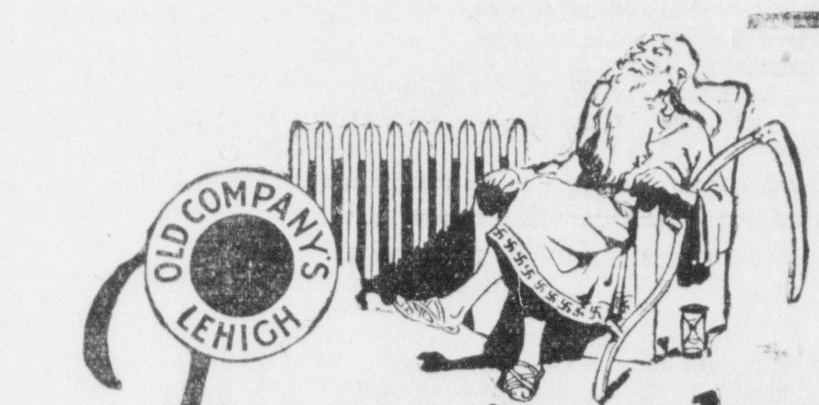

THE END.

Gathering News For Courier Readers

How Does The Courier Get It's News?

This is a question frequently asked by readers in discussing the Courier. "I don't see how you cover so much territory," is the comment.

There are twenty persons employed by the Courier to gather the news of Bristol and the other towns in lower Bucks County. This staff of correspondants is ever on the alert for interesting items in their respective communities.

This group of twenty persons is composed of two correspondants assigned to cover the activities of the schools of Bristol Borough and Bensalem Township; one who reports the main sporting events of Bristol and nearby vicinity; a staff representative is located at Doylestown, the county seat, to gather the news of general interest happening there and to give first hand reports of the court doings.

In Bristol the council meetings, school board meetings and all of the main happenings within the borough are reported by a staff of representatives.

A staff reporter also 'covers' hospitals, undertakers, police courts and etc., daily.

The news of the churches in Lower Bucks County are featured every Saturday and are presented in a pleasing manner.

The International News Service, the second largest news gathering organization in the world, keeps the Courier informed every minute of the day as to world happenings as well as national and state affairs.

In addition to all of these agencies there are the countless friends who are ever thoughtful and when something of interest occurs in their section at once telephone the Courier and a staff reporter is assigned to write the story. Many a news 'tip' is received in this manner and accidents, fires, etc., are often telephoned almost as soon as they occur. To these friends the Courier feels deeply indebted.

Progress In Circulation

Today the Courier is distributed on the same day of publication to practically every community from Tullytown to Torresdale and from Bristol to Hulmeville.

At the end of 1929 the Courier had established in addition to a thorough coverage in Bristol daily routes at Tullytown, Edgely, Hulmeville, Newportville, Croydon, Andalusia, Fairview, West Bristol and Bath Road.

At the close of 1930 two more suburban communities have the Courier delivered the same day of publication. These are Bridgewater and Torresdale Manor.

Thorough Coverage for Advertisers

With the daily distribution of the Courier to subscribers in the villages and towns as enumerated above the Advertiser can readily see that the most thorough coverage is to be obtained by using Courier space.

Progress in Reader Interest

The Courier today is publishing in addition to all of the local news and such other features as it carried at the close of 1929, the writings of such well known authors as Winifred Black, an editorial writer of note; Nancy Lee, who deals with "Advice to Girls" in a way which makes her writings of exceptional interest and value to those seeking information of this nature; a comic strip by Milt Gross, one of the best comic artists of the day; a daily sport cartoon by Hardin Burnley, who vividly pictures the highlights in the realm of sports.

Progress in Advertising

There has been a substantial increase in the amount of advertising space used by Courier advertisers which is evidence that they, too, realize the ever increasing value of the Courier as an advertising medium.

They Wanted a Home and Got It

The Quaint Old Place Is Much Too Big for Them, but This "Foolish" Family Doesn't Care for Flats

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE house is too big for them, three or four times too big. And it's a little draughty and some of the windows shake like everything when the wind blows. The old-fashioned staircase is very narrow, but the old-fashioned parlor is big and spacious, with paneling of black oak clear to the ceiling. There's a cupola at the top of the house, a square affair with windows in it; there are nine fireplaces in the old house—I counted them myself the other day.

There's a theatre in the basement too, if you please. The real theatre with seats for about thirty people, a stage and tin footlights for candles, scenery and everything.

There's a hedge of cypress around the old place—rather a strange affair in the daytime, but when the wind blows in from the sea, and the moon rides high in the heavens the old cypress hedge murmurs a strange low song that takes the ringing of the bell buoy in the harbor close by for an accompaniment. And you can light a fire of faggots in one of the nine grates and sit there and watch the dancing flames and think of the gay companies that have flocked up and down the narrow staircase in the old house and in and out of the great old rooms and forget all the hurry and scurry we moderns call life.

The children are wild about the old house—three children there are that will live in the house, two boys and a girl.

A Real Home

And the boys are planning glorious slides down the banisters and the games of hide and seek in the dark old basement.

And the little girl, oh, she has already decided to write a play and invite all her friends to see the play. Now, dear, what a time there's going to be in the old theatre down here in the great dark basement.

Alou Ben Adam—may his tribe increase—is delighted with the new house and especially with the new garden, and the old basement. He barked his approval on the occasion of the first visit.

But the man and the woman and the three children who are going to live in the house are foolish things, they do not care for elevators, or hard wood floors or bathrooms with case walls made of mirrors, and the fixtures tinted lavender or blue.

What they want is a home, and a fireplace and what they call in their strange, foolish way "atmosphere," and they're going to get all these things in the old house that stands in the wonderful old garden behind the cypress hedge that is always talking and whispering and sighing, and lamenting, and crooning, over the days that have gone.

I wish I was one of those little children. Don't you wish you were one too? Somehow I'd like to have that old house to remember instead of apartment A on the tenth floor, or the sixteenth floor or the twentieth floor of the newest and smartest apartment house in town—wouldn't you?

Murdered Man is Buried in Phila.; Murderers Are Held

"He then grabbed the money from my husband," said the witness and "shot him and ran."

The witness told of her husband's held a conversation with him but was almost instant death as he dropped to the floor at her feet. "He never said a word," sobbed Mrs. Gamils.

The witness stated that the other two men had also entered the place but left. She had not noticed them particularly.

Corporal Deane, State Police, Morrisville, was the next and last witness. Deane said that Massey and Tagg had made certain statements to him. Corporal stated that the pair had told him that the three including Snipes had stopped at the Blue Spruce Inn on the morning in question and that Snipes walked up to the bar, faced Gamils and ordered him to "stick 'em up," and that Snipes fired the revolver which killed Gamils.

Attorney Kane cross-questioned Deane but made little headway in confusing the witness.

Assistant District Attorney Kilcoyne asked Justice Keating to hold Snipes, Tagg and Massey without bail on the charge of murder. He also asked that Meyers be held in $5,000 bail for further investigation.

Justice Keating so decided.

Meyers was unable to get bail and was recommitted to jail. All four prisoners were immediately taken back to Doylestown.

The prisoners presented a very dejected looking group. Snipes wore light gray trousers and a leather jacket. He was hatless. His head was constantly down and his eyes never left the floor. This was his attitude all day Sunday while being questioned at Morrisville barracks.

Massey wore a black sweater, brown suit, blue tie. He wore a brown overcoat but no hat.

Tagg, the most dapper looking one of the quartette, was neatly dressed in a brown suit, light soft brown hat and a two-toned brown silk scarf.

Meyers, the smallest one of the group, wore a dark suit, black shirt and a dark cap.

Tagg attracted most attention as many in the room as well as those outside knew him. He was in the town where he resides. As he walked from the Troopers' automobile to the office acquaintances called to him, "Hello John." He just gave them a glance. In the room his brother attempted to

WEST BRISTOL

The Beresford family was entertained at a theatre party by Mr. and Mrs. Adams, who formerly resided at Fourth and Steele avenues, one evening recently. Late in the evening the Adams' returned to the Beresford home here, remaining for a visit. They returned to their Philadelphia home on Sunday night.

Ruth Morris is suffering with grippe at her Maple Shade home. Frank McGoldrick is ill at his West Bristol home.

The apron social at the Newport Road Community Chapel on Saturday evening was a pronounced success. Prizes were given for several games and contests, a pie eating contest, peanut scramble, donkey game and cake walk being among the program numbers enjoyed. The cake walk was won by Miss Caroline Lange and J. Oliver Bowers. Several were in attendance at the affair, and a goodly sum was taken in.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lange and daughter, Caroline, were overnight guests of Mrs. Joseph Murphy, Philadelphia, on Friday, and while in that city attended a party.

This evening at the Newport Road Chapel the members of the boys' club will gather at 7.30 for a meeting.

Why Commute?

Why travel back and forth to your employment, which is here in Bristol, when such desirable dwellings are to be obtained here at such reasonable rents? It will pay any individual to investigate!

Work Where You Live and Live Where You Work.

If you are employed in Bristol you should live here. It will be less expensive and there are numerous other advantages derived from making your home in the town where you are employed.

You will save many hours a year which are now spent in traveling and you will have more time with your family.

The saving in money will also be considerable. Add to that which you are now paying for rent the amount which you spend in traveling back and forth to your employment here. You'll be surprised at the total. Rent a house here at a moderate rental and bank the difference.

Houses.

Comfortable dwellings, well situated and at moderate rents are to be found in that portion of Bristol which is immediately adjacent to the P. R. R. passenger station.

These houses make ideal homes and consist of six rooms with bath.

Conveniences.

They are heated by hot-air furnaces with a direct pipe leading to every room. They are lighted with electricity and are equipped with sewer, municipal water and gas.

Each room is well lighted and yet the space devoted to windows is not excessive.

Front porches are another attractive feature as is also a small rear yard where children can play in safety away from the perils of traffic.

Houses such as these would rent for considerably more in any city, where the conveniences would not surpass those offered here.

TULLYTOWN A. C. WINS OVER BRISTOL

By T. M. Juno
TULLYTOWN, Feb. 18.—Scoring with ease during the forty minutes of playing, the Tullytown A. C. basketball five won their eleventh victory in twelve starts last night in Monti's Hall when they conquered the Bristol A. A. quintet by the one-sided count of 48-16.

The A. A.'s were no match for the home team who had an easy victory from the beginning of the game until the final whistle. Twenty field goals were rung in by the resident team and to add to this total they scored eight shots from the foul mark.

The boys from Bristol could in no way cope with the winners in any department of play, but they kept up the old fighting spirit and when the last whistle blew they were still in there playing, being real gluttons for punishment.

"Eddie" Roe and "Jimmy" Lake shared the spotlight with the scoring honors of the night. Roe hit the net for a sextet of double-deckers and to add to this scored five foul goals in six tries, a total of seventeen points. Lake also scored seventeen points. His came as a result of eight twin-pointers and a gift shot.

Although Roe and Lake were the high scorers it must be stated that the other men on the team helped by their floorwork and passing. Carman and Roberts were the boys who did the best work on the floor and were leaders in the passing department of the winners. Roe and Lake received quite a number of passes under the basket which were converted into two-pointers.

Rodgers and Connors were the back-court players and their defense was almost to perfection. The visitors only scored four field goals within the ten foot mark while the rest were long shots. To add to his glory, Connors made a shot that drew much applause from the spectators. Kneeling in the center of the court he shot the ball which went through the net without touching the rim. Rodgers scored five points besides his defensive work. "Cago" Parell and "Gunner" Corrigan were the leaders for the losers. Corrigan playing his first game in three years made a wonderful impression on the spectators by scoring two wonderful shots. Parell and Wright scored the remaining twelve points.

The line-up:

Tullytown A. C.	Pd. G.	Fl. G.	Pts.
Carman f	2	0	4
Lake f	8	1	17
Roberts c	1	0	2
Roe g	6	5	17

In one of the best games played in the preliminary this year, the Tullytown Reserves won their "rubber" contest from the Hooley All-Stars, also known as the Silver Dragons. The final count of this fray was 35-28.

In earlier games of the season the All-Stars had defeated the Reserves and then the Reserves beat the All-Stars. Last night decided which team was the superior and the Reserves finished on the long end of the score.

Up until the last eight minutes of play the All-Stars held the edge. Tullytown then gave a spurt and with field goals by DiCiccio and Carlen brought the count to 26-25 in Tullytown's favor. The All-Stars tied it up but with four minutes to go another goal by Stake, DiCiccio and Carlen put the battle "on 'ee."

Emmis and Stake were the stars for their respective teams. Emmis scored nine points while Stake scored twelve.

The line-up:

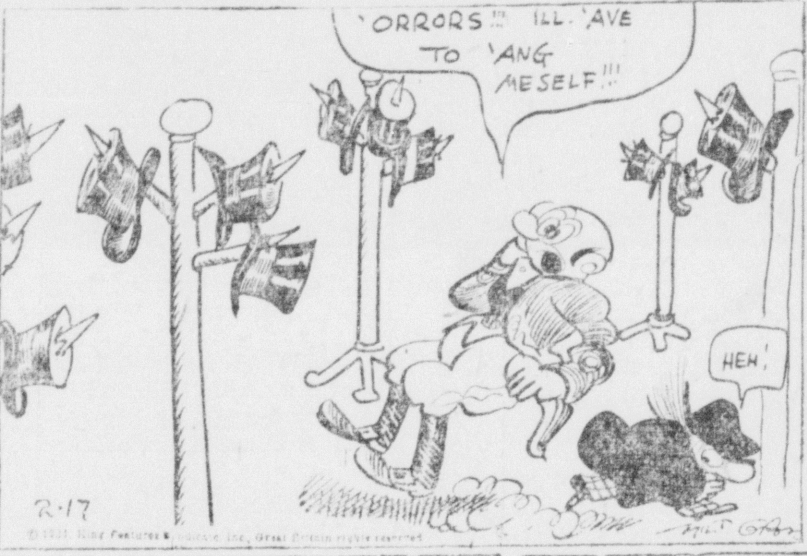

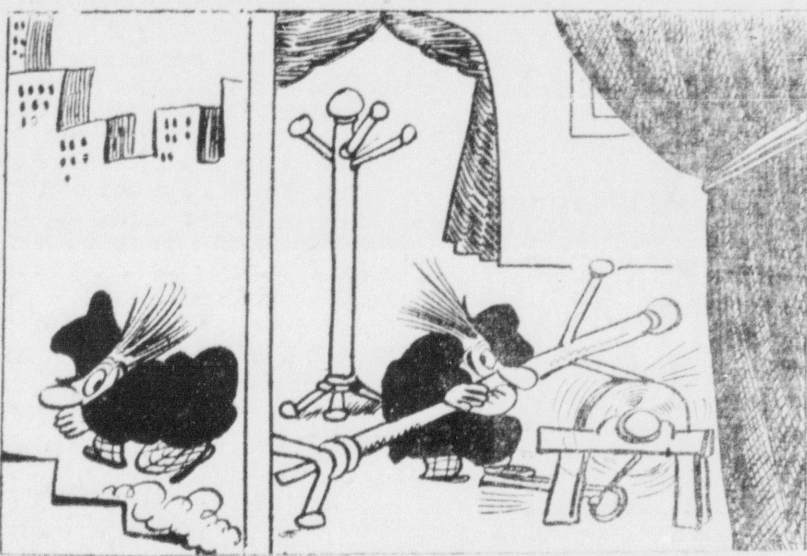

Tullytown Reserves	Pd. G.	Fl. G.	Pts.
Carlen f	3	2	8
DiCiccio f	2	2	6
Stake c	6	0	12

The Meanest Man

Bensalem Teams Meet Defeat Here

Basketballers knew as soon as the visitors started the game, that it was going to be a close contest, and each member of the team appeared determined to do her job to the best of her ability.

At the end of the first quarter the score was 19 to 7 favor Bristol. The Cardinal and Gray led, 19 to 13, at half time and 31 to 16 when three-quarters were over. The visitors made a magnificent rally in the last quarter but failed to get by the comfortable lead held by the besieged.

The victors' strength lies in their all round ability. Every player has been trained to play any position. Glennis Still is captain and the main stem of the team. Captain Still is a guard who has been on the team for two years. She is tall, sticks to her man like a leech, and is a leader. Budney was high scorer for the losers with twelve points to her credit, while Whyatt did the honors for the Cardinal and Gray.

Edgely P. T. A. Arranges A Meeting of Interest

EDGELY, Feb. 18.—The regular monthly meeting of the Edgely Parent-Teacher Association will be held tomorrow evening at the school house here.

Residents of Edgely are requested by the officers and members of the P. T. A. to make this the biggest meeting of the year. Members are asked to attend, and to invite their friends. "The success of any organization depends upon the co-operation of the members," the officers believe, and are asking support.

An interesting program will be given, with some Bristol folks giving a real surprise. It is asked that Edgely residents attend and show appreciation of the visitors taking part in this program.

Our 1931 Tennis Hopes

By HARDIN BURNLEY

GEORGE LOTT →
"HE SHOULD BE THE KEY MAN OF THE U.S. DAVIS CUP TEAM THIS YEAR!"

PERSISTENT rumors that Rene Lacoste will return this Spring to compete for France in international tennis increases interest in the next Davis Cup competition for which early eliminations are already being played. Again the United States is hoping to recover that trophy chiefly through the development of talented youth, now that the great Bill Tilden has turned "pro" and most of his stellar associates have retired. Much of our leading young talent has already been bap-tized under Davis Cup fire with France winning, of course, as it has for four successive years, starting in 1927.

George M. Lott, Jr., John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison know the night of Henri Cochet, Jacques Brugnon and Jean Borotra, but time favors the former trio. The Americans are still growing youngsters. The Frenchmen are showing signs of inevitable slow-up.

Lacoste, once called by Tilden "the greatest player of all time," quit the courts in 1928 because of lung trouble which seemingly has been cured. The long rest may do him good if physical rust has not set in and if the strain of play does not bring on any relapse.

As to Borotra and Brugnon, we'll have a chance to see how far they've slipped (if that has happened) when they arrive here in March for an active indoor campaign. With the famed "Bouding Basque" and Brugnon will be

Christian Roussu, described as "the best of France's coming stars."

Meanwhile all the aspirants for Uncle Sam's Davis Cup team are busy on courts, indoor and out, throughout the nation. Late in January, Lott successfully defended his Canadian championship, defeating Van Ryn in a five-set finals match. They then teamed and won the doubles title in three straight sets.

Johnny Doeg, national champion, and Francis X. Shields, runner-up in that two-hour 1930 struggle for the title, are both reported in fine form, as is Sidney Wood, the 19-year-old wonder from the West Coast.
